HOPE AHEAD FOR ETHEL BARRYMORE

Though a "Personal Charm" Actress She May Sift Out.

EXCELLENT READER IS MISS MARLOWE

Too Many Pinwheels and Too Much Fudge in "American Idea."

By ALLEN D. ALBERT.

In the space of eight days-Mrs. Fiske Julia Marlowe, and Ethel Barrymore! Every hour of the theatrical dial is covered there. Mrs. Fiske is a leader with Duse in the projection of an art chiefly patural. Miss Marlowe is probably the most accomplished exponen of the traditions of acting now on the English-speaking stage. Miss Barry-more is the inheritrix of traditions and technique, and a striking illustration of the power of personality.

How far is personality to prevail in acting by women? The theory of all stage art is that it consists of the representation of human personalities as disclosed in a series of acts predetermined The more completely the actor can create wholly different personalities for his several roles the more nearly com plete is his art. But is this the stand ard as to acting by women? If it is no one of these three has earned high

Some Personal-Charm Actresses.

The tendency of the modern stage ! to say that whatever else a lovely woman may undertake she must not im molate her personal charm. To that tendency Miss Maxine Elliott, Miss Mary Mannering, and Miss Barrymore are now named is easily the most capable of the three, from every point of view. But it is questionable if this kind of acting advances any actress substantially,

One sign is that such personal charm cannot last. Either it wears out or It passes as the woman advances in years. Acting of the other kind develops as the actress grows older and the woman's position becomes more and more nearly secure—as in the case of Mrs. Skidons, Charlotte Cushman, and Duse. Another sign is that the skill demanded comes to be mure and more that of the playwright and less and less that of the actress. Thus, the manager is on the lookout for a "Mary Mannering part" or an "Ethel Bar rymore role," and not for a play which, aving stength in Itself, requires of the leading actress that she bend herself to its chief character, assume the temperament and moods of that character, and create as far as possible the precise personality which the play-wright's equation requires. This business of pattern roles means stagnation for the actress, manifestly. But it has another effect, like that already indicated—that preity soon playgoers tire of the woman's roles as they are danged, said in his review of 'Paid In Full.'

"It was a triumph! Without a star without even a cast of 'distinguished players,' and delightfully free from the break through the lines. Miss Annie Russel, for example, once went to the expense of giving a professional matine in order to prove that she could act a role of the most littense qualities. Miss Barrymore, while she acted a trylical Ethelesque part in "The Country Mouse," set against it "Carrots," a chiaracter role almost exclusively. But most of them find it impossible to escape the penalty of their own authors, and enterto-order regirants there was none, and—thank heaven—the 'commons of the same thing year after year, very much as certain illustrators are forced to draw the same thing year after year, very much as certain illustrators are forced to draw the same thing year after year, very much as certain illustrators are forced to draw the same king of made-to-order regirants there will present their new star, Louise Gunning, in the new s

This is hardly the fate ahead of Miss celle," Barrymore. Her inheritance, her ability to command a production for almost any kind of play which may tempt her fancy, her evident skill all promise a better career. But this point is well taken at this particular moment—that "Lady Frederick" gives Milady Barrymore no apportunity to redeem that promise.

Brain Added to Personal Charm.

Miss Marlowe is within her own field almost without a rival. Ada Rehan, Mary Anderson, Minna Gale, and Viola Allen have proven themselves possesses of the same kind of skill, but all save one of them is retired and that one fortunately for her, has not stood aloof while the stage advanced, but has kept with the head of the procession. Yet Miss Marlowe's field is vastly superior that of these personal-charm act resses. She has charm in abundance But she has more than that—she has brain. So, keeping to old standards

MR. WILLIAM

THE WORLD AND HIS WIFE

By Charles Prederic Nirdlinger.

REVIEW FROM THE WASHINGTON POST, SEPTEMBER 22, 1908, ON THE FIRST PRESENTATION BY WM. FAVERSHAM, AT THE BELASCO THEATRE, OF "THE WORLD AND HIS WIFE."

"It Is Not Too Much to Say That Mr. Faversham Does the Best Piece of Acting That He Has Ever Done."

FOR THE AMERICAN STAGE when he put on THE WORLD AND HIS WIFE' at the Belasco Theatre last night. It is a PRODUCTION SO STRONG THAT IT GRIPS THE ATTENTION AND RIVETS IT FAST TO THE STAGE, SO FINISHED in detail that it can best be COMPARED TO THE WORK OF ONE OF THE OLD MASTERS, and it brings a COMPANY OF ABLE PLAYERS together, a great relief after so many nights of stars without support, Rarely has a new production received a velcome that was last night granted freely this first effort of MR. FAVER NAM since he entered the ranks of the actor-manager. The audience, which crowded the house, was unstinted in its praise, and at the close of the play called MR. FAVERSHAM before the cur-

"THE WORLD AND HIS WIFE" presents ONE OF THE STRONGEST MORAL L. SSONS which it has been the fortune of the stage to drill into the public. At the same time it is ONE OF THE CLEANEST PLAYS THAT HAS BEEN STAGED. It teaches its lesson without the use of the brush of pitch so often found in the problem plays whose only excuse is that they 'teach a lesson,' 'Be thou as cold as ice, and as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny' is as old as the Bard of Avon, and older. But NEVER HAS THE POW-ER OF CALUMNY TO DISTORT THE TRUTH BEEN MORE STRONGLY EXEMPLIFIED THAN IN THE WORLD AND HIS WIFE.

"MR. FAVERSHAM plays the part of Don Ernesto, the young Spaniard accused of loving the wife of his benefactor. It is not too much to say that MR. FAVERSHAM DOES THE BEST PIECE OF ACTING in this part that HE HAS EVER DONE. His virility, his finished acting, make the part of Ernesto. FAVERSHAM'S forte has been usually his repression, but in the last act of his new play he lets himself out and fills A GREAT MOMENT with A GREAT SPEECH, which is as convincing as the truth.

"Opposite MR, FAVERSHAM plays his wife, JULIE OPP, in the part of Donna Theodora, and she does BY FAR THE BEST PIECE OF WORK THAT THE WRITER HAS SEEN HER DO. The part is one that gives her a great chance, and she never overdoes it. She is very nearly GREAT at the moment she sees her husband dead.

"SO EXCELLENT IS THE CAST with which MR, FAVERSHAM has endowed this first production of his since he became an actor-manager that it is difficult to single out members for praise above the others, "A criticism of "THE WORLD AND HIS WIFE" would be incomplete without a mention of the settings. THE SCENES ARE A WORK OF ART, so THIS AFTERNOON AT 3. TONIGHT AT 8:15.
